International Conference

European Steel and Coal Heritage

10.04.2025-11.04.2025
Katowice [PL]

ticcih.pl

The conference will continue the discussions initiated in 2023 on the protection and preservation of industrial and mobile heritage in Europe. Participants at the conference titled “Industrial Heritage in the Heart of Green Europe” discussed directions for protecting industrial heritage, particularly related to the use of fossil fuels. At the end of the conference, important recommendations for the preservation of industrial heritage in Europe were announced. This year's conference aims to be a platform to specify topics crucial for the practical protection of fossil-fuel heritage, including coal.

Key topics for discussion include the preservation and continued use of mining heritage as a vital means of documenting and presenting coal's central and historic role during the “Industrial Revolution.” Planned presentations and discussions will focus on priorities for the protection of working industrial heritage, particularly in the context of the need for continued but limited fossil-fuel extraction to meet the needs of museums and organisations that protect, present and operate industrial sites with historic vehicles, machinery, and equipment using fossil fuels.

Another important topic of the conference will be the adaptive re-use of former industrial sites, including examples across the world where industrial heritage and mobile heritage has been at the centre of sustainable regeneration, and where the carbon already embodied within existing buildings and structures has been saved and given a new life.

The outcome of the conference will be the identification of goals and methods of protection, as well as pathways for implementation, thereby ensuring that the rich achievements of European technology and industry can be properly and meaningfully preserved and made accessible to future generations.

In order to further develop the effective care of technical heritage in Europe, the conference will present the state of play of the work on the establishment of a new European organisation, TICCIH Europa.
